Least developed countries have been seeking complete exemption from any further commitments in support or protection of agriculture. While a number of developing countries support flexibility to safeguard food and livelihood security through the application of SP products and SSM instruments, most developed and some developing country Members insist that these instruments should not be used to deny market access.

As may be seen, while there are common interests and concerns between India and some other WTO Members, divergences in positions remain on the level of ambition as well as on key issues in the negotiations.

The negotiations are scheduled to be concluded by 1 January, 2005.
